Sunday Theme:

"Anticipating the Future" (Peace)
Isaiah 2:1-5

There are any number of nations at war right now. There are many families from our nation who have loved ones in harm's way. We have many reasons to be praying for peace on this first Sunday in Advent. There are wives, husbands, sons and daughters in Afghanistan and Iraq who have been severely wounded and killed this past year. We are aware of the growing conflict and tension between North and South Korea.

We know there are the millions of people whose lives are over-leveraged, under-funded, and mortgaged-to-the-hilt-consumers who have no idea how they're going to pay for their Christmas presents this year. There are millions who are out of work and cannot find employment.

There are the grieving people who lost loved ones last year during December, and who are reminded of it all over again right now. There are the people in the hospital, people in nursing care centers, people in hospice care, and people suffering from Seasonal Affective Disorder seeking the peace of Advent.

Join us Sunday for the launch of the Advent season.
